

WILSON AND BRYAN AT ODDS ON THE TREATY

JACKSON DAY BANQUET AFFORDS COMMON OPPORTUNITY TO RE-ENTER NATIONAL POLITICAL ARENA

DIVIDES PARTY INTO TWO CAMPS

That much-heralded Jackson Day banquet of our Democratic brethren has come and gone and the anxious "unterrified and unwashed" now know what is in store for them. "Moses" Woodrow delivered his fateful "message to the faithful" which was devoted entirely to the necessity for the ratification of the peace treaty and League of Nations covenant unchanged in jot or tittle. Mr. Wilson justified his position in these words, "None of the objects we professed to be fighting for has been secured or can be made certain of without this nation's ratification of the treaty and its entry into the covenant." He further says:

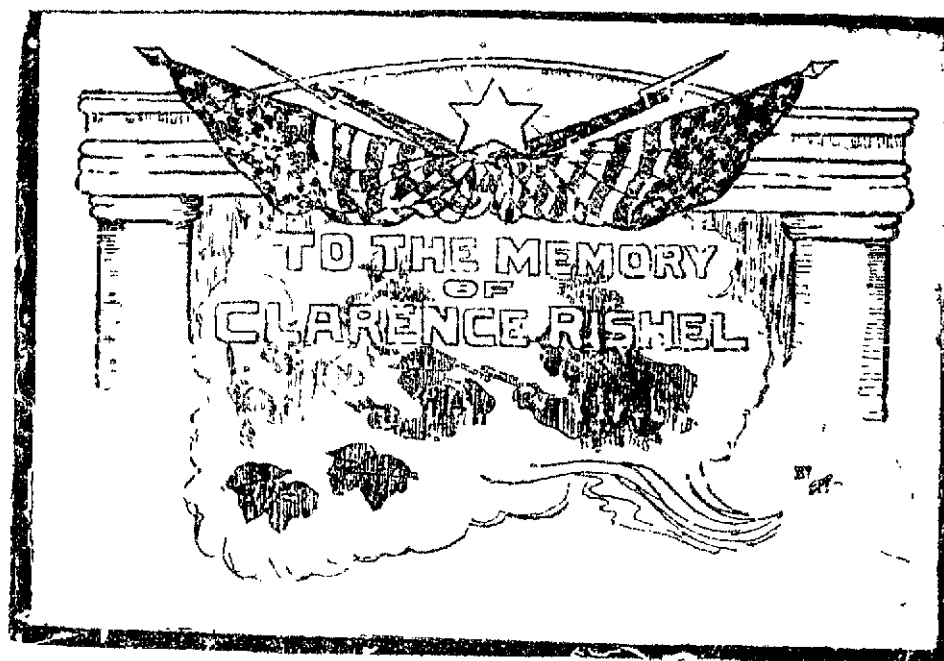

"I have endeavored to make it plain that if the Senate wishes to say what the undoubted meaning of the league is, I shall have no objection. There can be no reasonable objection to interpretations accompanying the act of ratification itself. But when the treaty is acted upon I must know whether it means that we have ratified or rejected it. We cannot rewrite this treaty. We must take it without changes which alter its meaning or leave it, and then, after the rest of the world has signed it, we must face the unthinkable task of making another and separate kind of treaty with Germany. But no more assertions with regard to the wish and opinion of the country are credited. If there is any doubt as to what the people of the country think on this vital matter, the clear and single way out is to submit it for determination at the next election to the voters of the nation to give the next election the form of a great and solemn referendum, a referendum as to the part the United States is to play in completing the settlements of the war and in the prevention in the future of such outrages as Germany attempted to perpetrate."

The Hon. William Jennings Bryan, of Nebraska, who essays to oust friend Woodrow from his rapidly-becoming-more-difficult-to-maintain-position of sole leader of the party, took issue squarely against what the President insisted shall be the policy of his party now and in the coming Presidential campaign, and inter-cine war is already raging in the ranks of the democracy. Bryan disagreed vitally, violently and vociferously with Mr. Wilson on the peace treaty issue and positively refuses to go along. He says he favored the treaty as it was first presented but when the United States Senate declared the document must be Americanized and could not be passed until every American right was absolutely safeguarded by interpretative reservations which mean what they say, he found it had become necessary to "face the situation as it is." In this connection he says in part:

"The Democratic senators stood with the President for ratification without reservation, and I stood with them, believing that it was better to secure within the league, after it was established, any necessary changes, than to attempt to secure them by reservations in the ratifying resolutions. But our plan has been rejected and we must face the situation as it is. We must either secure such compromises as may be possible or present the issue to the country. The latter course would mean a delay of at least fourteen months, and then success only in case of our securing a two-thirds majority in the Senate."

"We cannot afford, either as citizens or as members of the party, to share with the Republican party responsibility for further delay. We cannot go before the country on the issue that such an appeal would present. The Republicans have a majority in the Senate and, therefore, can by right dictate the Senate's course. Being in the minority, we cannot demand the right to decide the terms upon which the Senate will consent to ratification. Our nation has spent 100,000 precious lives and more than $20,000,000,000 to make the world safe for democracy and the one fundamental principle of democracy is the right of the majority to rule. It applies to the Senate and to the House, as well as to the people. According to the constitution, a treaty is ratified by a two-thirds vote, but the Democratic party cannot afford to take advantage of the constitutional right of a minority to prevent ratification. A majority of Congress can declare war. Shall we make it more difficult to conclude a treaty than to enter a war?"

"Neither can we go before the country on the issue raised by Article X. If we do not intend to impair the right of Congress to decide that question of peace or war when the time for action arises how can we insist upon a moral obligation to go to war which can have no force or value except as it does remain the independence of Congress?" We owe it to the world to join in an honest effort to put an end to war forever, and that effort should be made at the earliest possible moment."

CLARENCE RISHELL HONORED BY CLASSMATES OF C. H. S.

Despite the gloom of the winter, a scene of honored people gathered at the Clearfield High School last evening to witness and participate in the exercises incident to the unveiling of the memorial tablet to the memory of Clarence Rishell, one of the High School graduates, to the Supreme Justice while he was on his final journey to the "battlegrounds of France."

The deceased soldier, who was a member of the Class of 1916, and that class, secured the memorial tablet and was in charge of last night's exercises.

The High School Orchestra furnished a delightful music, and on occasion, the class to the number of twenty-four, attended the exercises, occupying seats upon the stage.

The bronze tablet, which will occupy a position of honor in the High School building, was placed upon an easel on the stage, an American flag covering it during the exercises, preceding the actual unveiling.

Rev. C. W. Baker, of the Lutheran church, opened the exercises with prayer, after which the class of 1916 sang a very pretty selection, "Howard Stewart," President of the class, then arose and after stating the purpose of the gathering, and paying tribute to the memory of his deceased class member introduced Dr. H. R. Bender, of Hanburg, to deliver the memorial address.

Dr. Bender was intimately acquainted with the deceased soldier, during his pastoral at Trinity Methodist church and with him it was indeed a "labor of love" on this occasion, and his selection was a particularly happy one.

In his address, Dr. Bender referred to the spirit shown by our American citizens thru every crisis from revolutionary times to the present, and after recounting the efforts and sacrifices of our leaders and their armies in the field, pointed out the lessons to be learned from the gigantic struggle he closed by entertaining and highly impressive remarks with a glowing and particularly eloquent tribute to the memory of Clarence Rishell. At the conclusion of which he walked over to the tablet and unveiled the tablet by the removal of the flag, for which the vibrant young soldier gave up his life.

The assemblage then rose as one man as the orchestra sounded the first note of the Star Spangled Banner, and joined with the rest of the singing the National Anthem. Dr. Bender's benediction closed the exercises.

The American Legion, attended the exercises in a body, and made a very creditable showing.

Our Appointed Place

That soul who values his place of abode will insist that nothing in his life shall be a mistake. Everyone has an appointed place in the world, and it is his duty to find it. The appointed place is not a matter of chance, but a matter of duty. It is a place where we can do our best, and where we can find our true home. The appointed place is not a matter of chance, but a matter of duty. It is a place where we can do our best, and where we can find our true home.

Ideal City of the Future

One can imagine the city of the future to be a place where buildings will rise up like the fingers of a giant, and the streets will be like the veins of a body. The city of the future will be a place where the sun will shine brightly, and the wind will blow gently. The city of the future will be a place where the people will live in peace and harmony, and where the world will be at peace.

Vast Waste Desert

The vast waste desert covers the greater part of the world. It is a place where the sun burns brightly, and the wind blows fiercely. The vast waste desert is a place where the people live in poverty and misery, and where the world is at war.

MEXICAN QUAKE LIFE LOSS IS 4000 ERUPTIONS ARE CONTINUING TODAY

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 9.—The complete death toll from Saturday night's earthquake and volcanic eruptions which rent a part of the state of Vera Cruz today were estimated conservatively at 4,000. Twelve towns and villages were reported destroyed. Today's volcanic eruption, according to dispatches to the newspaper El Universal, put helpless people in a new situation of terror. A small range of mountains in Vera Cruz were flattened out throwing lava and sulphur gas into the air. A stream of lava 600 feet wide flowed from a fissure tonight, the dispatch said. Registration of earthquakes continued, the dispatch added. The strong volcanic eruption came without warning according to advices here. Farmers were in the fields at the base of the hills when the explosion began, and many of them were killed while the herds were caught in the flowing lava almost simultaneously with the volcanic eruption. Entire villages disappeared.

The Christian era was not adopted as a means of reckoning time until several centuries after Christ's time. THE COMMISSIONERS' APPOINTMENTS

A week or two ago in these columns mention was made of the intense interest in political circles in this congressional district. Almost overshadowing interest in the peace treaty, the problem as to where Wilson is going to stand in the coming split in Democratic ranks and what, if anything, a fair price committee can do, every little happening in politics is getting preferred attention. The early announcement of candidates for the office of national delegate focused the attention of Republicans in this county on other matters having a direct and an indirect relationship to district politics. It was small wonder then that more than the usual interest was attached to the appointments that were to be handed out at the Clearfield County court house and since interest usually centers about the Commissioner's office the searchlights of publicity, in order to satisfy the innate desire of man for information, are turned on the minutes of the organization meeting of the board of commissioners and the whys and wherefores discussed and argued by the multitude.

Numerous and sundry are the requests for publication of the minutes of the meeting and in reply to these many requests we have obtained an accurate copy of the minutes and they are reprinted in the adjoining column.

The Progress has already commented on the re-election of L. C. Norris as Chief Clerk to the commissioners. It is hardly necessary to add anything to what we have already said in this connection unless it should be the statement of our belief that Mr. Norris could not be replaced at the present salary and that his election for another year or term is a fortunate circumstance for those having business with that office who desire to be courteously treated and accommodated by quick, efficient service. The only enemies he has are those whose bills he is forced to pare when comparing invoices as they drop on his desk.

Although Mr. Dale is the senior member of the trio which is to conduct the affairs of the county, seniority and experience did not seem to cut any ice with the Democratic member of the board who hastened to nominate his fellow newcomer as president of the board. This appears to us to be a mistake. If for no other reason, courtesy should have prompted the election of Mr. Dale as president of the board.

As to the county solicitorship there hangs a tale, the unfolding of which would require too much space here to relate. Suffice it to say that while Miller & Hartwick were capable officials, Mr. Woodward is fitted to occupy this important post as a guide to the legal action of the board and will make a fine solicitor. Other law firms were considered previous to the meeting but plans went awry.

Thomas J. Lowell, the efficient Sealer of Weights and Measures and Dr. A. D. Cowdrick, who has acceptably served as county physician to the jail, the children's home and other county institutions, were two of the holdover appointees. Neither of these men are believed to have been wholly acceptable to the majority of the board but even office holders are sometimes wise enough to refrain from spilling good milk. Besides Lowell and Cowdrick have a host of followers throughout the county who would not take kindly to having them bowled out.

When all was said and done and the votes tabulated on all the propositions before the board final unanimity existed so far as the minutes are concerned except in the selection of a Steward for the County Home. The Home for the past year has been under the capable management of Mr. W. E. Davis and since his administration there even the county watchdog has not been able to pick a flaw. Mr. Dale recognized this efficiency and nominated Mr. Davis after Mr. Farrell had put George McMullen, a hotelkeeper of Grampian, in nomination. Mr. McMullen is a Democrat but on the first ballot Mr. Weimer, the new Republican member of the board, voted for Mr. McMullen. Mr. McMullen's tenure of office will be of an experimental nature and his conduct of the home will be watched with interest.

Summing up it will be noted that Mr. Farrell put four Democratic aspirants in the field and landed one with Weimer's help.

Mr. Dale nominating W. E. Davis and wife. A vote being taken Messrs. Weimer and Farrell having voted for Mr. McMullen, Mr. Dale voting for Mr. Davis. It was, therefore, decided that Mr. and Mrs. McMullen were elected Steward and Matron of the County Home.

Miss Laura Bailey was unanimously elected as clerk for the Poor District.

The question of appointing a physician to the County Home was then presented, and the following names offered as candidates:

Dr. J. M. Quigley
Dr. G. B. Yeamey
Dr. J. Paul Frazz
Dr. W. S. Piper
Dr. L. C. Rowles

Mr. Weimer nominating Dr. W. S. Piper and Mr. Farrell nominating Dr. L. C. Rowles. Mr. Dale nominating Dr. G. B. Yeamey. A vote being taken Mr. Dale voting for Dr. Yeamey, Mr. Weimer for Dr. Piper, Mr. Farrell voting for Dr. Rowles, whereupon a second vote was taken. Dr. Piper receiving votes of Mr. Weimer and Mr. Farrell, Dr. Yeamey receiving the vote of Mr. Dale. Whereupon on motion of Mr. Dale it was decided to make the election of Dr. Piper unanimous. Carried.

The next question was that of physician to the County Jail, Clearfield Borough, Lawrence township, and Children's Home. There being two candidates for this office, Dr. A. D. Cowdrick was nominated by Mr. Weimer, and Dr. L. C. Rowles was nominated by Mr. Farrell. A vote being taken, Messrs. Dale and Weimer voted for Dr. A. D. Cowdrick, and Mr. Farrell voted for Dr. Rowles. On motion of Mr. Farrell, it was decided that the election of Dr. Cowdrick be made unanimous, which was accordingly done.

The question of Chaplain for the County Home was taken up, and it was

Mr. Weimer nominated the Solicitor, and the County Home physician and landed both with Mr. Farrell's help. Mr. Dale received no help from the Democratic member. Mr. Dale also voted straight Republican while Mr. Weimer kicked over the partisan traces in one instance, that of County Home Steward.

Going Back to the Beginning.

The first hole that early man made in a piece of shell or stone was by a blow of a stone hammer, which happened to strike in such a way as to knock out a small bit of the stone or shell, says Dr. Clinton Hartley Levy. When this man saw the hole and noted its convenience, he slipped the shiv of a deer into the shell or stone and hung it around his neck as an ornament. Others began to use themselves how they could make holes in things and, taking a bit of pointed stone, they worked with that until the hole was drilled.

Alligators and Crocodiles.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

Miss Jennett Patterson left on Wednesday for Pittsburg, where she has accepted a position in the Children's Home in that city.

William Holden and bride have returned from their honeymoon trip, and are domiciled in the Holden homestead on South Walnut street.

The week of prayer has almost run its course and good results from the meetings have been obtained. The attendance was not as large as it should have been, yet the congregations nightly averaged up pretty well under the circumstances. Some interesting and instructive biblical topics were touched upon from a true religious standpoint, by the ministers, who preached alternately in the three churches.

Mrs. Frank Hastings is in Pittsburg, spending the week with some relatives and friends.

Mrs. Walter Fullerton spent several days this week in the home of her father, Daniel Reid, at Glen Richey.

Mrs. R. A. Russell, who resides at Bridgeport, was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Joseph Fullerton, on Bloomington avenue yesterday.

Paul Hummel, who has been working at Endicott, N. Y., and also at Akron, Ohio, for the past six months, is home, and expects to remain in Curwensville until the Spring months.

Miss Esther Twigg, of Bloomington avenue, has been seriously ill at the home of her parents for the past two weeks. Her ailment is something akin to pneumonia.

Miss Elsie Thorne, who has been ill for some time, is reported as improving slowly.

Mrs. Raymond Bloom was taken to

Clearfield Hospital yesterday, for medical treatment.

C. A. Morabough, who occupied an office in the Thompson-Stover block, destroyed by fire recently, expects to move his office into the corner room of the Fred Robison property soon.

It is likely at the next session of borough council, that body will petition to change the hours of police duty. The service hours have been from 12 o'clock noon, until midnight. The change that will be asked for by citizens, will be that the policeman's hours on the street be from 6 o'clock P. M. until 6 o'clock A. M., those seeking to have the change made, claiming that since "bonze" is out, there is no necessity for a daylight-policeman.

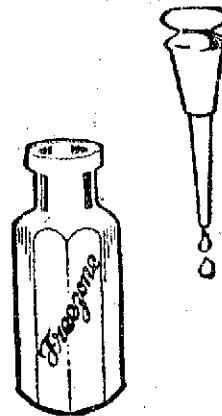

Since the purchase of the old Hartshorn farm from Sandrie last week, much speculation is agog as to what the purchase means. Some allege that the ground was obtained by Mount Union people who are interested in the erection of a brick yard in that locality. While the location is not the most desirable for an industry of that kind, yet there are certain facilities favorable. Both clay and water can be had in close proximity to the site, and coal can be reached in large quantities sufficient for all purposes, not far distant. The railroad that leads from hogback to the old Bailey quarries, could be put in repair and utilized in transporting the manufactured product to hog back junction, where it could easily be transferred to either the B. R. & P. or P. R. R. railroads, and sent forward to either the eastern or western markets. It is believed by people in this town who keep in touch with the industrial situation, that a brick yard will be built on or near the Hartshorn farm early in the spring, and by people who are directly interested in the manufacture of brick. If the plant is erected, however small the output may be, it will naturally tend toward increasing the mercantile trade of Curwensville.

The new board of councilmen, at Monday evening's session, made no mistake in re-electing John P. Irvin to the office of president of that body. He has already served two full terms in that capacity, with both honor and fidelity, and being elected for the third time speaks well for him as a presiding officer, and the confidence his fellow members have in his integrity and ability. Mr. Irvin is a hard worker, and has spent more of his time, probably, in looking after borough affairs than any other member of the board, during his past six years' service. Every borough matter that is brought to his attention, gets a hearing, no matter how trivial it may appear to others, and no one is turned away without his petition and claim being thoroughly investigated. He is a servant of the people, and as such, it is his desire that all may receive justice at his hands, so far as it lies in his power to do so.

LIFT OFF CORNS!

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little Freezone on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then you lift it right off. Yes, magic!

A tiny bottle of Freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

Freezone is a sensational discovery of a Cincinnati genius. It is wonderful.

ATTENTION F. O. E.

Members, there will be a special meeting held in the Logg rooms January 14th, 1920, at 8 P. M. sharp.

A proposition will be presented at this meeting by the trustees, that will be of interest to every member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, a good attendance is desired.

By order of the Worthy President.

Sound of Cannonading.

An authority on the subject states that the sound of cannonading can be heard much farther than that of thunder. The limit of the carrying power of thunder is about fifteen miles, while twice that number of miles is not considered any great distance for the sounds of battle to travel.

DRINK HOT-WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST

Says you really feel clean, sweet and fresh inside, and are seldom ill.

If you are accustomed to wake up with coated tongue, foul breath or a dull headache; or if your meals sour and ferment, you have a real surprise awaiting you.

Tomorrow morning, immediately upon arising, drink a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of lime stone phosphate in it. This intended to neutralize and then wash out of your stomach, liver, kidneys and the rest of your system all the indigestible waste, poisons, sour bile and toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal.

Those subject to headaches, backaches, bilious attacks, constipation or stomach trouble, are urged to get a quarter pound of lime-stone phosphate from the drug store and begin enjoying the morning inside bath.

It is hot water, and soap cleanse, purify and freshen the skin, so hot water and a teaspoonful of lime stone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Lime-stone phosphate is an inexpensive white powder and is sold in all drug stores.

His Prescription

His father has a pronounced partiality for Bill and the latter's diplomat enough to wait this feeling of his father's whenever an opportunity offers. Quite recently young William injured his hand, and when his father returned home he inquired, "Well, how is the hand?" Seeing his father, as in a mellow mood William answered, "I think some ice cream would help it."

Eat Less Meat If Back Hurts

Take a glass of Salts to flush kidneys if bladder bothers you—Drink lots of water.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting just right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad-Salt from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad-Salt cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

SYNOPSIS.

Part I.

CHAPTER I.—Adventurous and reckless rather than criminal, and excited by liquor, Curly, a young cowboy, is caught in a horse-stealing adventure. Involvement in the stolen stock in the town of Saguenay, Ala., the band separates. Curly and his partner staying in town, they are awakened and told a piece in town in pursuit of them. They elude their pursuers. Overtaken next day, Mac is killed by the posse and Curly made captive. After he has shot one and himself, been wounded. The man shot is Luck Cullison.

CHAPTER II.—Cullison's friends, all cattlemen, determine to Lynch Curly, as an example to cattle thieves. With the posse around his neck he is saved by the intervention of Kate Cullison, Luck's daughter.

CHAPTER III.—His wound dressed, and further violence not apprehended, Curly is sent for by Cullison. He questions the boy concerning a notorious outlaw, Soapy Stone, real leader of the rustlers who had been Curly's trading partner. Curly learns that Soapy Stone is Cullison's bitter enemy and exercises a baleful influence over the cattlemen. Curly tells of his quarrel with his father. Cullison goes back for Curly.

CHAPTER IV.—Curly rescued Soapy Stone from a bear trap into which he has stumbled, and discovers that the outlaw is young Sam's rival for the hand of Laura London. She gives Curly a note to deliver to Sam, and Flandrau and Stone set out for the latter's ranch.

CHAPTER V.—There Curly meets his companions of the rustling expedition and delivers Laura's note to Sam. Young Cullison believes Stone is his friend and says he will stick by him. Flandrau sees the move is being planned and becomes convinced it is a trap. He saves the ranch to go to Saguenay. Curly accompanies him.

CHAPTER VI.—Eavesdropping at a meeting place, Curly hears Stone and his hold up the train at a crossing known as Tin Cup, and after the robbery shoot young Cullison and leave his body on the ground. Stone, thus gaining his revenge on the ex-sheriff through his son's death and disgrace. Curly is accused by Stone of being a spy of Luck Cullison. They are separated, but part with the understanding that their next meeting will mean a fight to the death. Curly makes a confession of Dick Maloney, cattleman, and they inform Luck Cullison of Stone's plot against his son.

CHAPTER VII.—After an all-night session at the Roundup club, in which Cullison has lost heavily, there is an exchange of sharp words between Luck and a shoe-shiner, Cass Kendrick, with whom Cullison has a feud.

CHAPTER II.

An Initiated Hat.

Mackenzie was rebelling the Sentinel while he ate a late breakfast. He had it propped against the water bottle, so that it did not interfere with the transportation of sausages, fried potatoes, hot cakes and coffee to their common destination.

Trying to do two things at once has its disadvantages. A startling headline caught his eyes just as the cup was at his lips. Hot coffee, precipitately swallowed, scalded his tongue and throat. He set down the cup, swore angrily, and gave his attention to the news that had excited him.

"While the citizens of Saguenay

were peacefully sleeping last night, a lone bandit held up the messengers of the Western & Southern Express company, and relieved them of twenty thousand dollars just received from the

"Perry Hawley, the local manager of the company, together with Ler Rogers, the armed guard, had just returned from the depot, where the money had been turned over to them and receipted for. Hawley had unlocked the door of the office and slipped in, followed by Rogers, when a masked desperado appeared suddenly out of the darkness, disarmed the guard and messenger, took the money passed through the door and locked it after him, and vanished as silently as he had come. Before leaving, he warned his victims that the place would be covered for ten minutes and at any attempt to call for help they would be shot. Notwithstanding this the imprisoned men fished their lives by raising the alarm."

Further down the page Mackenzie discovered that the desperado was still at large, but that Sheriff Bolt expected shortly to lay hands on him.

He folded the paper and returned to his room to make preparation to return to his ranch. The buzz of the telephone called him to the receiver. The voice of Cullison reached him.

"That you, Mac? I'll be right up. No, don't come down. I'd rather see you alone."

The owner of the Circle C came right to business. "I've made a miscalculation, and while I've got it I'm going to skin off what's coming to you."

He had taken a big roll of bills from his pocket, and was counting off what he had lost to his friend. The latter noticed that it all seemed to be in twenties.

"Twelve hundred. That squares us, Mac."

The shoe-shiner was vaguely uneasy without a definite reason for his anxiety. Only last night Cullison had told him that a single bank in town would advance him a dollar. Now he had money in plenty. Where had he got it?

Mackenzie's eye fell on a copy of the Sentinel protruding from the other's pocket. "Read about the holdup in the W. & S. Express? That fellow had his nerve with him."

"Sho! This holdup game's the easiest yet. He got the drop on them, and there was nothing to it."

"How did he know there was money coming in last night?"

"There's always a leak about things of that sort. Somebody talks. I know it myself, for that matter."

"You knew? Who told you?"

"That's a secret, Mac. Come to think of it, I wish you wouldn't tell anybody that I knew. I don't want to get the man who told me in trouble."

"Sure I won't." He passed to another phase of the subject. "The Sentinel says Bolt expects to catch the robber. Think he will?"

"Not if the fellow knows his business. Bolt has nothing to go on. He has the whole Southwest to pick from. For all he knows, it was you."

"Yes, but—"

"Or more likely me." The gray eyes of the former sheriff held a frosty smile.

In spite of that smile, or perhaps because of it, Mackenzie felt again that flash of doubt. "What's the use of talking foolishness, Luck? Course you didn't do it. I know you too well."

But the trouble was Mackenzie did not know him well enough. Cullison was hard up, close to the wall. How far would he go to save himself? In his slow, troubled fashion, Mac wondered if his old side partner's streak of lawlessness would take him as far as a holdup. Of course it would not, he assured himself; but he could not get the ridiculous notion out of his head.

Mackenzie drifted to the courthouse. He found Sheriff Bolt in his office. The Scotsman wanted to discuss the robbery, but was shy about attacking the subject. While he bogged at it, Bolt was off on another tack.

Inside of a quarter of an hour the sheriff had found out all he wanted to know about the poker game, Cullison's financial difficulties, and the news that

"Ever See This Before?"

Luck had liquidated his poker debt since breakfast. Moreover, he had talked so casually that his visitor had no suspicion of what he was driving at.

Mackenzie attempted a little sleuthing of his own. "This holdup fellow kind of slipped one over on you last night, Bolt?"

"Maybe so, and maybe not."

"Got a clue, have you?"

"Oh, yes—yes." The sheriff looked straight at him. "I've a notion his initials are L. C."

Billie felt himself flushing. "What makes you think that, Nick?"

Bolt walked to a cupboard and unlocked it. His back was toward the cattleman, but the latter could see him take something from a shelf. Turning quickly, the sheriff tossed a hat upon the table.

"Ever see this before?"

Mac picked it up. His fingers were not quite steady, for a great dread drenched his heart like a rush of icy water. Upon that gray felt hat with the pinched crown was stamped the individuality—and the initials—of Luck Cullison.

"Don't know as I recognize it," he lied, not very readily. "Not to know it. Why?"

"Thought perhaps you might know it. The holdup dropped it while getting away."

Mackenzie's eyes flinched. "Dropped it. How was that?"

"A man happened to come along San Miguel street just as the robber swung to his horse. He heard the cries of the men inside, guessed what was doing, and exchanged shots with the miscreant. He shot this hat off the fellow's head."

"Who was the man that shot the robber?"

"Cass Kendrick."

"But he didn't claim to recognize the holdup?"

"Not for certain. He guessed a man whose initials are the same as those in that hat."

"If you mean Luck Cullison, it's a damned lie," exploded the cattleman. He was furious with himself, for he felt now that he had been unsuspectingly helping to certify the suspicions of the sheriff. Like an idiot, he had let out much that told heavily against his friend.

"I hope so. What about this hat, with the two holes shot through, the find?"

"Sho! We all wear hats just like that. Look at mine." Billie held it out eagerly.

"Has yours an L. C. stamped in the sweat band?" Bolt asked with a smile. "I know you ain't his friend, Nick. But you want to be fair to him even if he did oppose your election?" Mackenzie faltered, appealing hand on the knee of the man seated opposite him.

"The sheriff of Pappago county. It doesn't make any difference who worked for or against me, Billie. I was elected, and I'm going to enforce the law. By the way, I've got to pay for some supplies this morning. Can you cash a check for a hundred?"

"I reckon so," Mackenzie drew from his pocket the roll Cullison had given him two hours before. He peeled five twenties from it. The sheriff observed that the prevailing denomination was the same.

"Get these from Luck?" he asked eagerly.

The cattleman stared at him, and the sheriff grew on him that he had been tripped again.

"Why do you ask?"

"Because it happens the bills stolen from the W. & S. were all twenties."

From the office of the sheriff, Mackenzie wandered to the club in search of Luck. He was thoroughly dispirited, both at the loss of the money, and yet was anxious to do so.

Cullison had left the club, but Alec Flandrau was still there. Billie drew him into a corner, and learned that Luck had just settled with him.

"Anyone see him give it to you, Alec?"

"No. He took me upstairs to the library and paid me."

"In bills?"

"Yes—in twenties."

Prof. Geo. F. Barker stated:—

"Margarine is, in my opinion quite as valuable a nutritive agent as butter itself. It is perfectly wholesome and desirable as an article of food." Professor Barker is the leading Food Analyst of the University of Pennsylvania.

Now, this new product "DIXIE" Margarine, just created by Wm. J. Moxley, founder of the Margarine Industry in America, is certainly far more palatable and far purer than the margarine which Professor Barker tested as well as being more nutritious than butter itself.

All milk and cream are supposed to be clarified and pasteurized at the big milk stations in the country before shipping. But here in the Moxley plant we take no chances. We re-clarify and re-pasteurize every gallon of milk and cream that comes to this plant. We don't take anybody's word for pasteurization. We re-pasteurize it ourselves and then we know.

Below is a picture of one great battery of Moxley Churns. Before the ingredients that go to make "DIXIE" Margarine ever reach these churns, these ingredients are absolutely pure, absolutely clean, absolutely pasteurized.

Try a pound of Dixie Margarine today. You have a pleasant surprise coming to both your palate and your pocketbook.

Pasteurization is the only absolute protection for all foods with milk ingredients. Ask your family physician or your health commissioner how vital pasteurization is. See U. S. Government reports on food value of margarine.

HUNTING CLUBS BUYING LARGE ACREAGES

Valuable Eleven Hundred Acre Tracts Being Acquired by Clearfield Sportsman

SEVERAL DEAL ARE CLOSED

The Pitch Pine Hunting Club closed the deal January 2nd last, with the Whitmer-Steele Lumber Company, whereby they become the owners of Tracts No. 5204 and 5305, consisting of 2,200 acres of forest land, located in Lawrence township, on the headwaters of Cold Stream, some ten or twelve miles north of Clearfield. The lands purchased by Pitch Pine Hunting Club adjoin the 2,250 acre piece recently secured by the Stone Run Hunting Club and these two sections immediately adjoin the 4,400 acre tract purchased last year by the Punksutawney Hunting Club.

The Whitmer-Steele Company, which originally owned 20,000 acres of mountain land in this section, have almost completed their lumber operation over same, and is disposing of the surface to local hunting clubs.

In addition to what has already been sold, negotiations are pending between the Whitmer-Steele Company and the Tar Kinn Hunting Club for the tract their camp is on along Lick Run, while the Goshen Rod and Gun Club has about closed the deal for the 1,100 acres along Stone Run, immediately adjoining their present property.

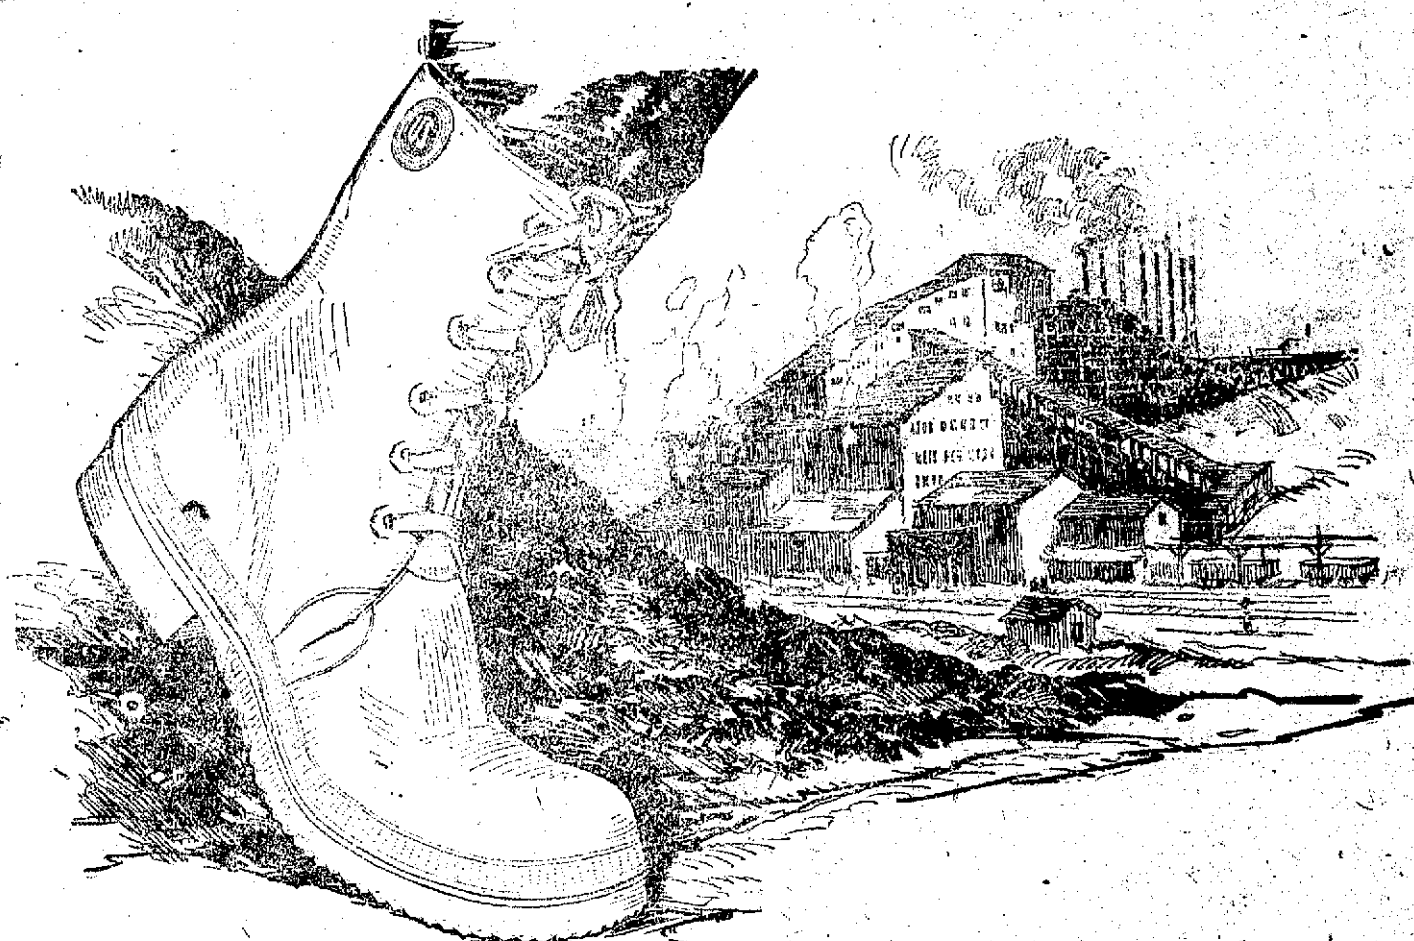

The Sparkling Springs Club, located at the head of Rattlesnake Run, are negotiating for the purchase of the 1,100 acre tract they are on, which adjoins the Pitch Pine and Goshen Club property, while the Crooked Run Club will also purchase one and possibly two 1,100 acre tracts on their side of Trout Run.

The Soudby or Madera Camp, in the Crooked Run region, is also arranging for the purchase of the tract their camp is on.

It is the purpose of the different hunting clubs to have fire lines cut around and through their properties, maintain fire wardens to work with the state foresters and propagate game and fish so far as in their power to do so. The lands will be open for hunting generally, but of course, no camps will be allowed to be built on the lands other than those belonging to the different clubs owning same.

The Girl in Business.

The big difference between young men and women in business is that the former know they have many years of work ahead, while the latter often feel their sojourn in the business world is for the temporary. Only to the extent that a girl considers her work as a lifetime affair, and accordingly devotes her whole heart and soul to it, can she succeed in making above the mark and life—Forbes Magazine.

Why "U.S." Rubber Shoes save your feet

How often do your feet feel tired and sore at night—muscles aching, the skin burning and chafed, blisters starting?

Half the foot troubles of miners come from the wrong kind of shoes—shoes that don't really fit, that don't stretch and "give" as you walk, that are too weak and flabby to support the feet properly, that don't keep you dry.

At last there's a rubber shoe that's built right for miners. It's the U.S. Bootee. Get a pair of them before you start work tomorrow.

Shaped so as not to rub up and down

at the heel, plenty of room at the toes, the support of a leather shoe, yet absolutely water-tight—the U.S. Bootee is made especially for miners.

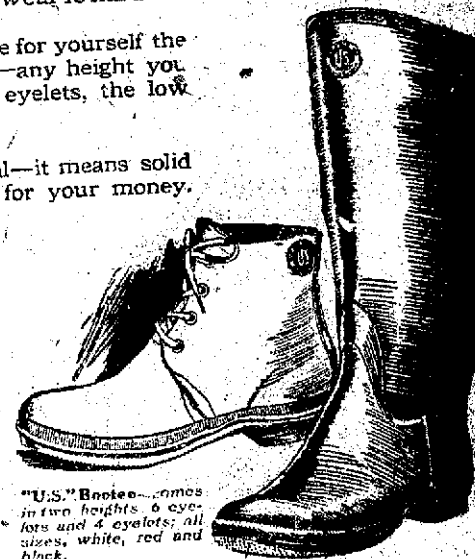

And they're made right, too—every pair backed up with extra thicknesses of pure rubber and good strong fabric at just those places where the wear is hardest.

Go to the store and see for yourself the U.S. Bootee for miners—any height you want, the high with six eyelets, the low with four.

Look for the U.S. seal—it means solid wear and long service for your money.

FOR FARMERS, TOO

Built especially to stand up under hard use in mines—the hardest possible kind of wear—the U.S. Bootee and the U.S. boot are now being adopted by farmers everywhere who know the value of sturdy, comfortable rubber footwear.

"U.S." Bootee—comes in two heights, 6 eyelets and 4 eyelets; all sizes, white, red and black.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR
DON'T DEPEND ON SPRING DELIVERIES

Spring deliveries of Ford cars have never been certain, and they should not be depended upon. Demand has always been greater for Ford cars than the supply or production. So, if you would be sure of having a Ford car, buy it now while deliveries are possible. Don't wait—even next month is an uncertainty.

Only a limited, specified number of cars has been allotted to this territory. That allotment cannot be increased, because the demand all over the country is greater than the supply or production. Get your order in now, and you will be one of those who is sure of a Ford car out of our allotment.

It's first come—first served. All orders are filled in rotation. So, if you would be favored, you would be certain of having a Ford car when you want it—then you will buy a Ford car now. A signed order with us is your protection. It is the result of the wisdom of looking ahead.

If you buy a Ford car now, don't think you have to "store" it. The Ford is a car made to serve its owner for business or pleasure throughout the entire year. Ford owners have long since come to recognize the fact. It is no longer popular to "lay-up" your car for the winter. Buy a Ford car now and use it now.

THE EVENT FOR WHICH THE PUBLIC HAS BEEN IMPATIENTLY WAITING

Every department will participate in this sale and each is putting in its utmost efforts to outdo the others in offering sensational values. This sale is held solely for the benefit of the public. THORN BROS.

Crooked Trails and Straight

By William MacLeod Raine

"For God's sake, don't tell anybody that." In a dozen jerky sentences the owner of the Fiddleback told Flandrau of the suspicions of the sheriff.

Together they went in search of Luck. But though they looked for him all day, he was not to be found. The last that had been seen of him Luck was walking along the plaza toward the hotel, not a hundred and fifty yards from the latter. A dozen men had spoken to him in the distance of a block. But he had not been seen to reach his hotel. He had not called for his room key. Somehow he had vanished, and none could tell how or where.

To halt his disappearance was as good as a confession of guilt. He searched Luck's room at the hotel. Among other things, he found an old envelope with interesting data penciled on it.

Before nightfall the word was whispered all over Saginaw that Luck Cullison, pioneer cattleman and former sheriff, was suspected of the W. & S. express robbery and had fled to save himself from arrest. At first men marveled that one so well known and so popular, one who had been so prominent in affairs, could be suspected of such a crime, but as they listened to the evidence and saw it fall like blocks of a building into place, the conviction grew that he was the masked bandit wanted by the sheriff.

Red-headed Bob Cullison finished making the diamond hitch and proudly called his cousin Kate to inspect the packhorse.

"You never saw the hitch thrown better, sis," he bragged, boylike. "Uncle Luck says I do it well as he can."

"It's fine, Bob," his cousin agreed, with the proper enthusiasm in her dark eyes. "You'll have to teach me how to do it one of these days."

She was in a khaki riding skirt, and she pulled herself to the saddle of her own horse. From this position she gave him final instructions before leaving.

It had been on Wednesday morning that Luck Cullison disappeared from the face of the earth. Before twenty-four hours the word was being whispered in the most distant canons of Papago county. The riders of the Circle C knew it, but none of them had yet told either Bob or Kate.

Now it was Friday morning and Kate was beginning to wonder why her father did not call her up. Could it be that Soapy Stone was pulling off his train robbery at Tin Cup and her father so busy that he could not take time to ride to a telephone station? She did not like to leave the ranch just now, even for a few hours, but other business called her away. Sweeney was holding down the fort at the Del Oro against Fendrick's sheepherders, and his weekly supply of provisions had to be taken to him. Since she wanted to see with her own eyes how things were getting along at the canon, she was taking the supplies in person.

She rode from sunlight into shadow and from shadow to sunlight again, winding along the hill trail that took her toward the Del Oro. After hours of travel she came to the saddle front which one looked down to the gap in the canon walls that had been the common watering place of all men's cattle, but now was homesteaded by her father. She could see the hut, the fenced line running parallel to the stream on the other side, some grazing cattle, Sweeney's horse in the corral.

The piteous bleating of a lamb floated to her. Kate dismounted and made her way toward the sound. A pathetic little bundle of frightened life tried to struggle free at her approach. The slim leg of the lamb had become wedged in the intersection of several rocks in such a way that it could not be withdrawn.

Kate pulled the boulder away, and released the prisoner. She took the soft, woolly creature in her arms, and examined the wounded limb, all torn and raw from its efforts to escape. A wound, she recalled, ought to be washed with cold water and bound. Returning to her horse, she put the little animal in front of the saddle and continued on the trail that led down to the river.

Sweeney came out from the cabin and hailed her. He was a squat, weather-beaten man, who had ridden for her father ever since she could remember. "What in Mexico you got there?" he asked in surprise.

She explained the circumstances under which she had found the lamb.

"And what you aiming to do with it?"

"I'm going to tie up its leg and take it across the river. Some of the C. F. herders are sure to find it before night."

"Sho! What are you fooling with Cass Fendrick's sheep for?" he grumbled.

"It isn't a sheep, but a lamb. And I'm not going to see it suffer, no matter who owns it. All just ride across and leave it outside the fence," she said.

"Lemme go. I know the river better."

Sweeney did not wait for her assent, but swung to the saddle. She handed him the lamb, and he forded the stream.

Sweeney saw some one disappear into a wash as he reached the fence. The rider held up the lamb, jabbered a sentence of broncho Spanish at the spot where the man had been, put down his bleeding burden, and cantered back to his own side of the river.

An hour later, Kate, on the return trip, topped the rise where she had found the lamb. Pulling up her pony, to rest the horse from its climb, she gazed back across the river to the rolling ridges among which lay the C. F. ranch. Oddly enough, she had never seen Cass Fendrick. He had come to Papago county a few years before, and had bought the place from an earlier settler. In the disagreement that had fallen between the two men, she was wholly on the side of her father. Sometimes she had wondered what manner of man this Cass Fendrick might be; disagreeable, of course, but after precisely what fashion?

"Your property, I believe, Miss Cullison."

She turned at sound of the suave, amused drawl, and looked upon a dark, slim young man of picturesque appearance. He was bowing to her with an obvious intention of overdoing it.

Her instinct told the girl who he was. She did not need to ask herself any longer what Cass Fendrick looked like.

He was holding out to her the blood-stained kerchief that had been tied to the lamb's leg.

"I didn't care to have it returned," she told him with cold civility.

"Now, if you'd only left a note to say so, it would have saved me quite a considerable climb," he suggested.

In spite of herself a flicker of amusement lit her eyes. She had a sense of humor. "I did not think of that, and since you have trouble to return it to me, I can only say thank you."

She held out her hand for the kerchief, but he did not move. "I don't know but what I'll keep it, after all, for a souvenir."

She ignored his sardonic mockery. "I don't let live creatures suffer when I can help it. Are you going to give me my handkerchief?"

"Haven't made up my mind yet. Perhaps I'll have it washed and bring it home to you."

She decided he was trying to flirt with her, and turned the head of her horse to start.

"Now your father has pulled his freight, I expect it will be safe to call," he added.

The bridle rein tightened. "What nonsense are you saying about my father?"

"No news, Miss Cullison; just what everybody is saying, that he has gone to cover on account of the holdup."

A chill fear drenched her heart. "Do you mean the holdup of the Limited at Tin Cup?"

"No I don't." He looked at her sharply. "Mean to say you haven't heard of the holdup of the W. & S. Express, company at Saginaw?"

"No. When was it?"

"Tuesday night. The man got away with twenty thousand dollars."

"And what has my father to do with that?" she demanded haughtily.

A satisfied spasm purred in his voice. "My dear young lady, that is what everyone is asking."

"What do you mean? Say it." There was fear as well as anger in her voice. Had her father somehow got into trouble trying to save Sam?

"Oh, I'm saying nothing. But what Sheriff Bolt means is that when he gets his handuffs on Luck Cullison he'll have the man that can tell him where that twenty thousand is."

"It's a lie."

He waved his hand airily, as one who declined responsibility in the matter, but his dark, saturnine face sparkled with malice.

"Maybe so. Seems to be some evidence, but I reckon he can explain that away—when he comes back. The holdup dropped a hat with the initials L. C. in the band, since identified as his. He had lost a lot of money at poker. Next day he paid it. He had no money in the bank, but maybe he found it growing on a cactus bush."

"You liar!" she panted, eyes blazing.

"I'll take that from you, my dear, because you look so blamed pretty when you're mad; but I wouldn't take it from him—from your father, who is hiding out in the hills somewhere."

Anger uncurbed welled from her in an inarticulate cry. He had come

Variations of the Straight Line Suit

With the beginning of the season suits and dresses were presented in a variety of silhouettes, and now that the midseason is here, the public has declared its preference. Wide-hip, crinoline and peg-top outlines captured and held their devotees, but a high percentage of well-dressed people pinned their faith to lines almost unbroken in suits, in dresses, and more particularly in evening gowns. No new aspirant has disturbed the stability of the straight-line suit, and now that manufacturers have tested out the public, that is the one thing they are entirely sure of. Therefore such new suits as they are turning out for present sale are variations of the straight-line models.

"Straight line" is not to be taken too literally. It means a silhouette having little definition at the waist-line. Such as there is results from belts and girdles and not from fitting. The two suits shown in the picture illustrate this point very clearly, and also bring out the introduction of new features that vary the style and make the suits interesting. There are at least two advantages in models of this kind—the style may be worn for a long time, it will pass out slowly and admits of a great variety of decorations.

In the suit at the left of the picture under-arm buckles and buttons appear in an original and attractive arrangement with lines running horizontally on the body of the coat and lengthwise below the belt. The coat opens over a vest and the cloth belt fastens through a buckle at the front. There is a small choker collar of fur.

In the figure at the right many buttons in two sizes and an original cut of the back of the body assume the responsibility of distinguishing this suit from its predecessors. A very long and narrow sash of the material slips twice about the waist and loops over at the left side. A wide turnover collar fastens up snugly about the throat. The skirts are both plain, one of them a trifle longer than the other. The length of skirts is very much a matter of individual taste at present, from six to nine inches off the floor.

Habit of Decision.
Most people who have succeeded in any direction of activity can trace the measure of their success to the habit of deciding things for themselves. One of the greatest temptations we have is to confide in others. By yielding to it we not only become a nuisance to our friends but keep on lowering our own powers of resistance.

Knew Value of Contrast.
For several evenings after school my small daughter persisted in coming home with an exceedingly unkempt-looking child. Upon asking her why she was possessed to go with such a dirty child she replied: "Oh, mother, I like to go with her 'cause it makes me look cleaner than I am."—Ex. change.

DIVIDES PARTY INTO TWO CAMPS

"Neither can we go before the country on the issue raised by Article X. If we do not intend to impair the right of Congress to decide that question of peace or war when the time for action arises, how can we insist upon a moral obligation to go to war which can have no force or value except as it does impair the independence of Congress? We owe it to the world to join in an honest effort to put an end to war forever, and that effort should be made at the earliest possible moment."

THE COMMISSIONERS' APPOINTMENTS

A week or two ago in these columns mention was made of the intense interest in political circles in this congressional district. Almost overshadowing interest in the peace treaty, the problem as to where Wilson is going to stand in the coming split in Democratic ranks and what, if anything, a fair price committee can do, every little happening in politics is getting preferred attention. The early announcement of candidates for the office of national delegate focused the attention of Republicans in this county on other matters having a direct and an indirect relationship to district politics. It was small wonder then that more than the usual interest was attached to the appointments that were to be handed out at the Clearfield County court house and since interest usually centers about the Commissioner's office the searchlights of publicity, in order to satisfy the innate desire of man for information, are turned on the minutes of the organization meeting of the board of commissioners and the whys and wherefores discussed and argued by the multitude.

Numerous and sundry are the requests for publication of the minutes of the meeting and in reply to these many requests we have obtained an accurate copy of the minutes and they are reprinted in the adjoining column.

The Progress has already commented on the re-election of L. C. Norris as Chief Clerk to the commissioners. It is hardly necessary to add anything to what we have already said in this connection unless it should be the statement of our belief that Mr. Norris could not be replaced at the present salary and that his election for another year or term is a fortunate circumstance for those having business with that office who desire to be courteously treated and accommodated by quick, efficient service. The only enemies he has are those whose bills he is forced to pare when comparing invoices as they drop on his desk.

Although Mr. Dale is the senior member of the trio which is to conduct the affairs of the county, seniority and experience did not seem to cut any ice with the Democratic member of the board who hastened to nominate his fellow newcomer as president of the board. This appears to us to be a mistake. If for no other reason, courtesy should have prompted the election of Mr. Dale as president of the board.

As to the county solicitorship there hangs a tale, the unfolding of which would require too much space here to relate. Suffice it to say that while Miller & Hartwick were capable officials, Mr. Woodward is fitted to occupy this important post as a guide to the legal action of the board and will make a fine solicitor. Other law firms were considered previous to the meeting but plans went awry.

Thomas J. Lowell, the efficient Sealer of Weights and Measures and Dr. A. D. Cowdrick, who has acceptably served as county physician to the jail, the children's home and other county institutions, were two of the holdover appointees. Neither of these men are believed to have been wholly acceptable to the majority of the board but even office holders are sometimes wise enough to refrain from spilling good milk. Besides Lowell and Cowdrick have a host of followers throughout the county who would not take kindly to having them bowled out.

When all was said and done and the votes tabulated on all the propositions before the board final unanimity existed so far as the minutes are concerned except in the selection of a Steward for the County Home. The Home for the past year has been under the capable management of Mr. W. E. Davis and since his administration there even the county watchdog has not been able to pick a flaw. Mr. Dale recognized this efficiency and nominated Mr. Davis after Mr. Farrell had put George McMullen, a hotelkeeper of Grampian, in nomination. Mr. McMullen is a Democrat but on the first ballot Mr. Weimer, the new Republican member of the board, voted for Mr. McMullen. Mr. McMullen's tenure of office will be of an experimental nature and his conduct of the home will be watched with interest.

Summing up it will be noted that Mr. Farrell put four Democratic aspirants in the field and landed one with Weimer's help.

Mr. Dale nominating W. E. Davis and wife. A vote being taken Messrs. Weimer and Farrell having voted for Mr. McMullen, Mr. Dale voting for Mr. Davis. It was, therefore, decided that Mr. and Mrs. McMullen were elected Steward and Matron of the County Home.

Miss Laura Bailey was unanimously elected as clerk for the Poor District.

The question of appointing a physician to the County Home was then presented, and the following names offered as candidates:

Dr. J. M. Quigley
Dr. G. B. Yeamey
Dr. J. Paul Frazz
Dr. W. S. Piper
Dr. L. C. Rowles

Mr. Weimer nominating Dr. W. S. Piper and Mr. Farrell nominating Dr. L. C. Rowles. Mr. Dale nominating Dr. G. B. Yeamey. A vote being taken Mr. Dale voting for Dr. Yeamey, Mr. Weimer for Dr. Piper, Mr. Farrell voting for Dr. Rowles, whereupon a second vote was taken. Dr. Piper receiving votes of Mr. Weimer and Mr. Farrell, Dr. Yeamey receiving the vote of Mr. Dale. Whereupon on motion of Mr. Dale it was decided to make the election of Dr. Piper unanimous. Carried.

The next question was that of physician to the County Jail, Clearfield Borough, Lawrence township, and Children's Home. There being two candidates for this office, Dr. A. D. Cowdrick was nominated by Mr. Weimer, and Dr. L. C. Rowles was nominated by Mr. Farrell. A vote being taken, Messrs. Dale and Weimer voted for Dr. A. D. Cowdrick, and Mr. Farrell voted for Dr. Rowles. On motion of Mr. Farrell, it was decided that the election of Dr. Cowdrick be made unanimous, which was accordingly done.

The question of Chaplain for the County Home was taken up, and it was

Mr. Weimer nominated the Solicitor, and the County Home physician and landed both with Mr. Farrell's help. Mr. Dale received no help from the Democratic member. Mr. Dale also voted straight Republican while Mr. Weimer kicked over the partisan traces in one instance, that of County Home Steward.

Going Back to the Beginning.

The first hole that early man made in a piece of shell or stone was by a blow of a stone hammer, which happened to strike in such a way as to knock out a small bit of the stone or shell, says Dr. Clinton Hartley Levy. When this man saw the hole and noted its convenience, he slipped the shiv of a deer into the shell or stone and hung it around his neck as an ornament. Others began to use themselves how they could make holes in things and, making a bit of pointed stone, they worked with that until the hole was drilled.

Alligators and Crocodiles.

Fourteen feet is about the limit of length for an alligator, but the crocodile is a much larger animal when full grown, specimens 30 feet long being not uncommon. Crocodile eggs, which have hard shells and look like goose eggs, are considered good to eat in the tropics.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

Miss Jennett Patterson left on Wednesday for Pittsburg, where she has accepted a position in the Children's Home in that city.

William Holden and bride have returned from their honeymoon trip, and are domiciled in the Holden homestead on South Walnut street.

The week of prayer has almost run its course and good results from the meetings have been obtained. The attendance was not as large as it should have been, yet the congregations nightly averaged up pretty well under the circumstances. Some interesting and instructive biblical topics were touched upon from a true religious standpoint, by the ministers, who preached alternately in the three churches.

Mrs. Frank Hastings is in Pittsburg, spending the week with some relatives and friends.

Mrs. Walter Fullerton spent several days this week in the home of her father, Daniel Reid, at Glen Richey.

Mrs. R. A. Russell, who resides at Bridgeport, was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Joseph Fullerton, on Bloomington avenue yesterday.

Paul Hummel, who has been working at Endicott, N. Y., and also at Akron, Ohio, for the past six months, is home, and expects to remain in Curwensville until the Spring months.

Miss Esther Twigg, of Bloomington avenue, has been seriously ill at the home of her parents for the past two weeks. Her ailment is something akin to pneumonia.

Miss Elsie Thorne, who has been ill for some time, is reported as improving slowly.

Mrs. Raymond Bloom was taken to

Clearfield Hospital yesterday, for medical treatment.

C. A. Morabough, who occupied an office in the Thompson-Stover block, destroyed by fire recently, expects to move his office into the corner room of the Fred Robison property soon.

It is likely at the next session of borough council, that body will petition to change the hours of police duty. The service hours have been from 12 o'clock noon, until midnight. The change that will be asked for by citizens, will be that the policeman's hours on the street be from 6 o'clock P. M. until 6 o'clock A. M., those seeking to have the change made, claiming that since "bonze" is out, there is no necessity for a daylight-policeman.

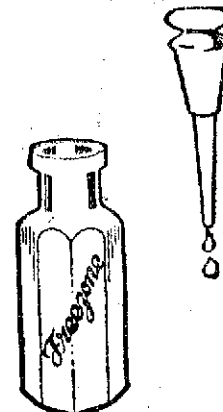

Since the purchase of the old Hartshorn farm from Sandrie last week, much speculation is agog as to what the purchase means. Some allege that the ground was obtained by Mount Union people who are interested in the erection of a brick yard in that locality. While the location is not the most desirable for an industry of that kind, yet there are certain facilities favorable. Both clay and water can be had in close proximity to the site, and coal can be reached in large quantities sufficient for all purposes, not far distant. The railroad that leads from hogback to the old Bailey quarries, could be put in repair and utilized in transporting the manufactured product to hog back junction, where it could easily be transferred to either the B. R. & P. or P. R. R. railroads, and sent forward to either the eastern or western markets. It is believed by people in this town who keep in touch with the industrial situation, that a brick yard will be built on or near the Hartshorn farm early in the spring, and by people who are directly interested in the manufacture of brick. If the plant is erected, however small the output may be, it will naturally tend toward increasing the mercantile trade of Curwensville.

The new board of councilmen, at Monday evening's session, made no mistake in re-electing John P. Irvin to the office of president of that body. He has already served two full terms in that capacity, with both honor and fidelity, and being elected for the third time speaks well for him as a presiding officer, and the confidence his fellow members have in his integrity and ability. Mr. Irvin is a hard worker, and has spent more of his time, probably, in looking after borough affairs than any other member of the board, during his past six years' service. Every borough matter that is brought to his attention, gets a hearing, no matter how trivial it may appear to others, and no one is turned away without his petition and claim being thoroughly investigated. He is a servant of the people, and as such, it is his desire that all may receive justice at his hands, so far as it lies in his power to do so.

LIFT OFF CORNS!

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little Freezone on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then you lift it right off. Yes, magic!

A tiny bottle of Freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

Freezone is a sensational discovery of a Cincinnati genius. It is wonderful.

ATTENTION F. O. E.

Members, there will be a special meeting held in the Logg rooms January 14th, 1920, at 8 P. M. sharp.

A proposition will be presented at this meeting by the trustees, that will be of interest to every member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, a good attendance is desired.

By order of the Worthy President.

Sound of Cannonading.

An authority on the subject states that the sound of cannonading can be heard much farther than that of thunder. The limit of the carrying power of thunder is about fifteen miles, while twice that number of miles is not considered any great distance for the sounds of battle to travel.

NEGLECTING THAT COLD OR COUGH?

Why, when Dr. King's New Discovery so promptly checks it

IT'S natural you don't want to be careless and let that old cold or cough drag on or that new attack develop seriously. Not when you can get such a proved successful remedy as Dr. King's New Discovery.

Cold, cough, gripe, croup does not resist this standard reliever very long. Its quality is as high today as it always has been—and it's been growing steadily in popularity for more than fifty years. At 50c and $1.20 a bottle at all druggists. Give it a trial.

Tardy Bowels, Inert Liver

They just won't let you put "pep" into your work or play. Sick headache comes from retaining waste matter and impurities in the body.

Feel right for anything—make the liver lively, the bowels function regularly, with Dr. King's New Life Pills. Simultaneously they produce results that cleanse the system and make the liver and bowels respond to the demands of a strong, healthy body. Still 50c at all druggists. Try them tonight.

John Mattern, of Johnstown, Pa., stopped off on his way home from Harrisburg, to visit his mother, L. C. Mattern on Cherry street.

Rev. Hummel, who has been a patient at the hospital for the last seven weeks, is improving nicely, and will be at home within a week or ten days.

Assets and Liabilities

BY MOLLY PRICE TOOK
"Daddy, I heard you dictating a letter when I was in your office yesterday and you were talking about assets and liabilities. What did you mean?"
"Assets are the good things a business owns—cash, property, merchandise. Liabilities are things a business doesn't want—debts, and incumbrances. If the assets of a man's business do not amount to more than its liabilities, it is in a bad way."

A twinkle appeared in Mr. Clark's eyes. By the way, Helen, he said, "you have assets and liabilities too. Why not start the New Year with a list of them?"

Helen thought hard. Her father was right. A girl has strong points and weak ones that stand in just as important a relation to her success in life as the property and debts of a business firm.

She took a paper and pencil and began writing. Helen Clark, Incorporated Assets. Good health. Can sew. Know how to study. Can walk farther than any girl in my room. Admire many people who succeed. Want to be somebody myself. Liabilities. Hate to obey parents. Lack cheerfulness when I cannot have my own way. Could do more for others. Don't know how to skate or swim. Forget to brush my teeth. Eat too much candy and cake. Wow! That's enough! I could go on forever. I saw that so clever a girl as Helen will not falter long on those liabilities. She will annihilate them. Any girl can profit by her example, beginning the new year, 1920, with as clean a balance sheet as possible.

Cheerfulness is the greatest asset a girl can have. Personality means health, alertness, cheerfulness, neat appearance, generosity, and willingness to serve others.

Poor health, lack of energy, a sluggish, peevish disposition, and sallow looks are liabilities that, January, 1920, should be paid out in full and rubbed off the books.

Endurance. After the tossup, it becomes the duty of the center to turn the floor and make himself an important factor in the team work. As both a defensive and an offensive player, his territory is the whole floor. He must move fast. If he is slow, he slows the whole team. Speed is more essential for him than for almost any other man on the team. To play a fast game as well as cover the entire floor requires endurance and stamina. So if you are trying for center, practice to get the ability to go it top speed for as long a period as possible.

Clever Foot Work. This position makes him the logical man around whom to build the team work. For this he not only needs speed and endurance but cleverness in dodging, pivoting, and side-stepping. He should practice in going down under the opponent's basket and by means of his height and jumping ability digging the ball out for his team mates.

Many times of course, the team is so made up that the duties of the center are changed. Sometimes he plays the game of a stationary forward or defensive guard. But the typical center should have the qualifications outlined and the boy who is out for center will not go far wrong, if he develops himself along these lines.

Indians' Apt Description.

Sinnapachugy is the word coined by the Navajo Indians of Utah for motorcar, and it is literally translated to mean a wagon that goes with a "chug," according to an authority on the language of the Navajo, Hopi and Apache Indians. The Indians are now seeking a word for the airplane. It is a miracle to them.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes—Most Women Can Have

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system. If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headache, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep them fit. 10c and 25c.

The Basketball Center

BY H. O. (PAT) PAGE

The center should be both an offensive and defensive player, and in addition, a good floor man. The qualifications of the center are as follows. The Ability to Get the Ball at the Tossup.

Ordinarily this comes from height and reach, but sometimes it is the result of jumping ability. The boy who aspires to make center on his team should practice timing his jump so as to hit the ball when he is at the top of his jump and not when he is still going up or he started coming down. He should also practice until he is able to tip the ball on the tossup to any spot he desires. Scrap for the ball on every tossup. Jump for it clean and fair but put all you have into every jump. Work to get the ball, not your opponent or the referee.

After the tossup, it becomes the duty of the center to turn the floor and make himself an important factor in the team work. As both a defensive and an offensive player, his territory is the whole floor. He must move fast. If he is slow, he slows the whole team. Speed is more essential for him than for almost any other man on the team. To play a fast game as well as cover the entire floor requires endurance and stamina. So if you are trying for center, practice to get the ability to go it top speed for as long a period as possible.

Eat Less Meat If Back Hurts

Take a glass of Salts to flush kidneys if bladder bothers you—Drink lots of water.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting just right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad-Salt from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad-Salt cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

CROOKED TRAILS AND STRAIGHT

William MacLeod Raine

COPYRIGHT BY G. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

Part I.

CHAPTER I.—Adventurous and reckless rather than criminal, and excited by liquor, Curly, a young cowboy, is caught in a horse-stealing adventure. Involvement in the stolen stock in the town of Saguenay, Ala., the band separates. Curly and his partner, staying in town, are awakened and told a police in town in pursuit of them. They elude their pursuers. Overtaken next day, Mac is killed by the posse and Curly made captive. After he has shot one and himself, been wounded. The man shot is Luck Cullison.

CHAPTER II.—Cullison's friends, all cattlemen, determine to lynch Curly as an example to cattle thieves. With the posse around his neck he is saved by the intervention of Kate Cullison, Luck's daughter.

CHAPTER III.—His wound dressed, and further violence not apprehended, Curly is sent for by Cullison. He questions the boy concerning a notorious outlaw, Soapy Stone, real leader of the rustlers who had been Curly's trading partner. Curly learns that Soapy Stone is Cullison's bitter enemy and exercises a baleful influence over the cattlemen. Mac is killed by the posse and Curly made captive. After he has shot one and himself, been wounded. The man shot is Luck Cullison.

CHAPTER IV.—Curly rescued Soapy Stone from a bear trap into which he has stumbled, and discovers that the outlaw is young Sam's rival for the hand of Laura London. She gives Curly a note to deliver to Sam, and Flannery and Stone set out for the latter's ranch.

CHAPTER V.—There Curly meets his companions of the rustling expedition and delivers Laura's note to Sam. Young Cullison believes Stone is his friend and says he will stick by him. Flannery sees Curly's move is being planned and becomes convinced it is a trap. He leaves the ranch to go to Saguenay. Curly accompanies him.

CHAPTER VI.—Eavesdropping at a meeting place, Curly hears Stone and his hold up the train at a crossing known as Tin Cup, and after the robbery shoot young Cullison and leave his body on the ground. Curly, during his escape on the express through his son's death and disgrace, is accused by Stone of being a spy of Luck Cullison. They are separated, but part with the understanding that their next meeting will mean a fight to the death. Curly makes a confession of Dick Maloney, cattleman, and they inform Luck Cullison of Stone's plot against his son.

CHAPTER VII.—After an all-night session at the Roundup club, in which Cullison has lost heavily, there is an exchange of sharp words between Luck and a shoe-shiner, Cass Kendrick, with whom Cullison has a feud.

CHAPTER II.

An Initiated Hat.

Mackenzie was rebelling the Sentinel while he ate a late breakfast. He had it propped against the water bottle, so that it did not interfere with the transportation of sausages, fried potatoes, hot cakes and coffee to their common destination.

Trying to do two things at once has its disadvantages. A startling headline caught his eyes just as the cup was at his lips. Hot coffee, precipitately swallowed, scalded his tongue and throat. He set down the cup, swore angrily, and gave his attention to the news that had excited him.

"While the citizens of Saguenay

were peacefully sleeping last night, a lone bandit held up the messengers of the Western & Southern Express company, and relieved them of twenty thousand dollars just received from the

"Perry Hawley, the local manager of the company, together with Ler Rogers, the armed guard, had just returned from the depot, where the money had been turned over to them and receipted for. Hawley had unlocked the door of the office and slipped in, followed by Rogers, when a masked desperado appeared suddenly out of the darkness, disarmed the guard and messenger, took the money passed through the door and locked it after him, and vanished as silently as he had come. Before leaving, he warned his victims that the place would be covered for ten minutes and at any attempt to call for help they would be shot. Notwithstanding this the imprisoned men fished their lives by raising the alarm."

Further down the page Mackenzie discovered that the desperado was still at large, but that Sheriff Bolt expected shortly to lay hands on him.

He folded the paper and returned to his room to make preparation to return to his ranch. The buzz of the telephone called him to the receiver. The voice of Cullison reached him.

"That you, Mac? I'll be right up. No, don't come down. I'd rather see you alone."

The owner of the Circle C came right to business. "I've made a miscalculation, and while I've got it I'm going to skin off what's coming to you."

He had taken a big roll of bills from his pocket, and was counting off what he had lost to his friend. The latter noticed that it all seemed to be in twenties.

"Twelve hundred. That squares up, Mac."

The shoe-shiner was vaguely uneasy without a definite reason for his anxiety. Only last night Cullison had told him that a single bank in town would advance him a dollar. Now he had money in plenty. Where had he got it?

Mackenzie's eye fell on a copy of the Sentinel protruding from the other's pocket. "Read about the holdup in the W. & S. express? That fellow had his nerve with him."

"Shot! This holdup game's the easiest yet. He got the drop on them, and there was nothing to it."

"How did he know there was money coming in last night?"

"There's always a leak about things of that sort. Somebody talks. I know it myself, for that matter."

"You knew? Who told you?"

"That's a secret, Mac. Come to think of it, I wish you wouldn't tell anybody that I knew. I don't want to get the man who told me in trouble."

"Sure I won't." He passed to another phase of the subject. "The Sentinel says Bolt expects to catch the robber. Think he will?"

"Not if the fellow knows his business. Bolt has nothing to go on. He has the whole Southwest to pick from. For all he knows, it was you."

"Yes, but—"

"Or more likely me." The gray eyes of the former sheriff held a frosty smile.

In spite of that smile, or perhaps because of it, Mackenzie felt again that flash of doubt. "What's the use of talking foolishness, Luck? Course you didn't do it. I know you too well."

But the trouble was Mackenzie did not know him well enough. Cullison was hard up, close to the wall. How far would he go to save himself? In his slow, troubled fashion, Mac wondered if his old side partner's streak of lawlessness would take him as far as a holdup. Of course it would not, he assured himself; but he could not get the ridiculous notion out of his head.

Mackenzie drifted to the courthouse. He found Sheriff Bolt in his office. The shoe-shiner wanted to discuss the robbery, but was shy about attacking the subject. While he bogged at it, Bolt was off on another tack.

Inside of a quarter of an hour the sheriff had found out all he wanted to know about the poker game, Cullison's financial difficulties, and the news that

"Ever See This Before?"

Luck had liquidated his poker debt since breakfast. Moreover, he had talked so casually that his visitor had no suspicion of what he was driving at.

Mackenzie attempted a little sleuthing of his own. "This holdup fellow kind of slipped one over on you last night, Bolt?"

"Maybe so, and maybe not."

"Got a clue, have you?"

"Oh, yes—yes." The sheriff looked straight at him. "I've a notion his initials are L. C."

Billie felt himself flushing. "What makes you think that, Nick?"

Bolt walked to a cupboard and unlocked it. His back was toward the cattleman, but the latter could see him take something from a shelf. Turning quickly, the sheriff tossed a hat upon the table.

"Ever see this before?"

Mac picked it up. His fingers were not quite steady, for a great dread drenched his heart like a rush of icy water. Upon that gray felt hat with the pinched crown was stamped the individuality—and the initials—of Luck Cullison.

"Don't know as I recognize it," he lied, not very readily. "Not to know it. Why?"

"Thought perhaps you might know it. The holdup dropped it while getting away."

Mackenzie's eyes flinched. "Dropped it. How was that?"

"A man happened to come along San Miguel street just as the robber swung to his horse. He heard the cries of the men inside, guessed what was doing, and exchanged shots with the miscreant. He shot this hat off the fellow's head."

"Who was the man that shot the robber?"

"Cass Kendrick."

"But he didn't claim to recognize the holdup?"

"Not for certain. He guessed a man whose initials are the same as those in that hat."

"If you mean Luck Cullison, it's a damned lie," exploded the cattleman. He was furious with himself, for he felt now that he had been unsuspectingly helping to certify the suspicions of the sheriff. Like an idiot, he had let out much that told heavily against his friend.

"I hope so. What about this hat, with the two holes shot through, the find?"

"Shot! We all wear hats just like that. Look at mine." Billie held it out eagerly.

"Has yours an L. C. stamped in the sweat band?" Bolt asked with a smile.

"I know you ain't his friend, Nick. But you want to be fair to him even if he did oppose your election?" Mackenzie faltered appealing hand on the knee of the man seated opposite him.

"The sheriff of Pappago county. It doesn't make any difference who worked for or against me, Billie. I was elected, and I'm going to enforce the law. By the way, I've got to pay for some supplies this morning. Can you cash a check for a hundred?"

"I reckon so," Mackenzie drew from his pocket the roll Cullison had given him two hours before. He peeled five twenties from it. The sheriff observed that the prevailing denomination was the same.

"Get these from Luck?" he asked eagerly.

The cattleman stared at him, and the shoe-shiner grew on him that he had been tripped again.

"Why do you ask?"

"Because it happens the bills stolen from the W. & S. were all twenties."

From the office of the sheriff, Mackenzie wandered to the club in search of Luck. He was thoroughly dispirited, both at the loss of the money, and yet was anxious to do so.

Cullison had left the club, but Alec Flannery was still there. Billie drew him into a corner, and learned that Luck had just settled with him.

"Anyone see him give it to you, Alec?"

"No. He took me upstairs to the library and paid me."

"In bills?"

"Yes—in twenties."

Prof. Geo. F. Barker stated:—

"Margarine is, in my opinion quite as valuable a nutritive agent as butter itself. It is perfectly wholesome and desirable as an article of food." Professor Barker is the leading Food Analyst of the University of Pennsylvania.

Now, this new product "DIXIE" Margarine, just created by Wm. J. Moxley, founder of the Margarine Industry in America, is certainly far more palatable and far purer than the margarine which Professor Barker tested as well as being more nutritious than butter itself.

All milk and cream are supposed to be clarified and pasteurized at the big milk stations in the country before shipping. But here in the Moxley plant we take no chances. We re-clarify and re-pasteurize every gallon of milk and cream that comes to this plant. We don't take anybody's word for pasteurization. We re-pasteurize it ourselves and then we know.

Below is a picture of one great battery of Moxley Churns. Before the ingredients that go to make "DIXIE" Margarine ever reach these churns, these ingredients are absolutely pure, absolutely clean, absolutely pasteurized.

Try a pound of Dixie Margarine today. You have a pleasant surprise coming to both your palate and your pocketbook.

Pasteurization is the only absolute protection for all foods with milk ingredients. Ask your family physician or your health commissioner how vital pasteurization is. See U. S. Government reports on food value of margarine.

HUNTING CLUBS BUYING LARGE ACREAGES

Valuable Eleven Hundred Acre Tracts Being Acquired by Clearfield Sportsmen

SEVERAL DEAL ARE CLOSED

The Pitch Pine Hunting Club closed the deal January 2nd last, with the Whitmer-Steele Lumber Company, whereby they become the owners of Tracts No. 5204 and 5305, consisting of 2,200 acres of forest land, located in Lawrence township, on the headwaters of Cold Stream, some ten or twelve miles north of Clearfield. The lands purchased by Pitch Pine Hunting Club adjoin the 2,250 acre piece recently secured by the Stone Run Hunting Club and these two sections immediately adjoin the 4,400 acre tract purchased last year by the Punksutawney Hunting Club.

The Whitmer-Steele Company, which originally owned 20,000 acres of mountain land in this section, have almost completed their lumber operation over same, and is disposing of the surface to local hunting clubs.

In addition to what has already been sold, negotiations are pending between the Whitmer-Steele Company and the Tar Kinn Hunting Club for the tract their camp is on along Lick Run, while the Goshen Rod and Gun Club has about closed the deal for the 1,100 acres along Stone Run, immediately adjoining their present property.

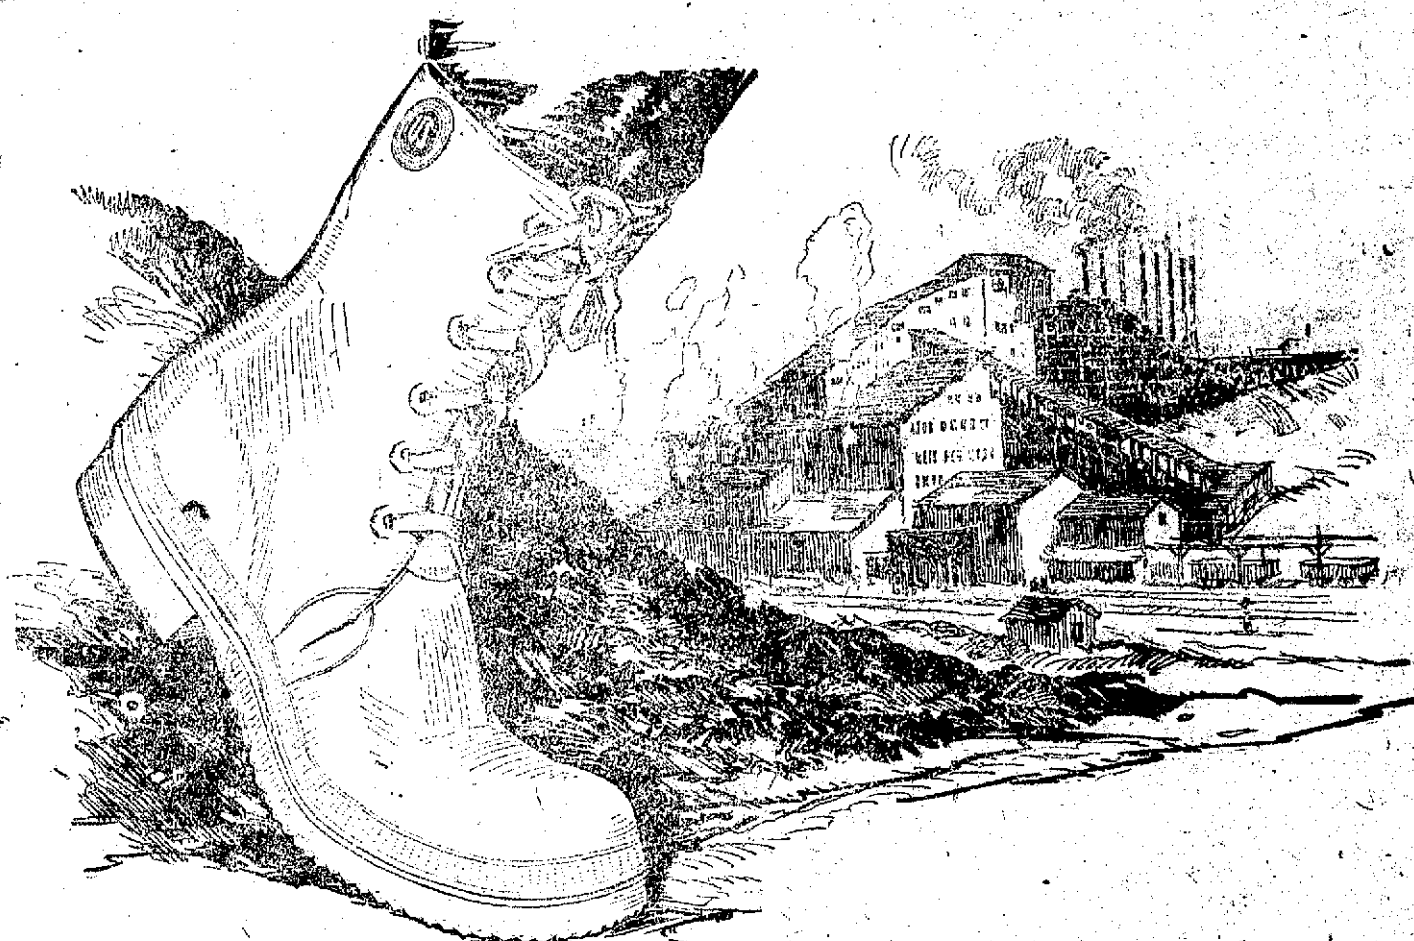

The Sparkling Springs Club, located at the head of Rattlesnake Run, are negotiating for the purchase of the 1,100 acre tract they are on, which adjoins the Pitch Pine and Goshen Club property, while the Crooked Run Club will also purchase one and possibly two 1,100 acre tracts on their side of Trout Run.

The Soudby or Madera Camp, in the Crooked Run region, is also arranging for the purchase of the tract their camp is on.

It is the purpose of the different hunting clubs to have fire lines cut around and through their properties, maintain fire wardens to work with the state foresters and propagate game and fish so far as in their power to do so. The lands will be open for hunting generally, but of course, no camps will be allowed to be built on the lands other than those belonging to the different clubs owning same.

The Girl in Business.

The big difference between young men and women in business is that the former know they have many years of work ahead, while the latter often feel their sojourn in the business world is for the temporary. Only to the extent that a girl considers her work as a lifetime affair, and accordingly devotes her whole heart and soul to it, can she succeed in making above the mark life.—Forbes Magazine.

Why "U.S." Rubber Shoes save your feet

How often do your feet feel tired and sore at night—muscles aching, the skin burning and chafed, blisters starting?

Half the foot troubles of miners come from the wrong kind of shoes—shoes that don't really fit, that don't stretch and "give" as you walk, that are too weak and flabby to support the feet properly, that don't keep you dry.

At last there's a rubber shoe that's built right for miners. It's the U.S. Bootee. Get a pair of them before you start work tomorrow.

Shaped so as not to rub up and down

at the heel, plenty of room at the toes, the support of a leather shoe, yet absolutely water-tight—the U. S. Bootee is made especially for miners.

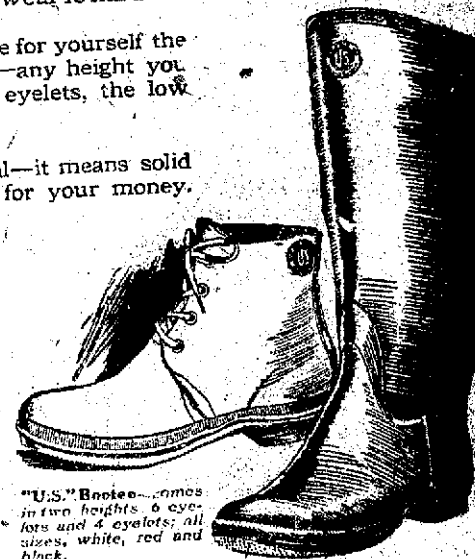

And they're made right, too—every pair backed up with extra thicknesses of pure rubber and good strong fabric at just those places where the wear is hardest.

Go to the store and see for yourself the U.S. Bootee for miners—any height you want, the high with six eyelets, the low with four.

Look for the U.S. seal—it means solid wear and long service for your money.

FOR FARMERS, TOO

Built especially to stand up under hard use in mines—the hardest possible kind of wear—the U.S. Bootee and the U.S. boot are now being adopted by farmers everywhere who know the value of sturdy, comfortable rubber footwear.

"U.S." Bootee—comes in two heights, 6 eyelets and 4 eyelets; all sizes, white, red and black.

HE FEELS LIKE A NEW MAN

Rheumatic pains, backache, pains in sides, sore muscles and joints or an "always tired" feeling are usually symptoms of disordered kidneys. W. W. JANUARY CLEARANCE SALE

BOSTON DEPARTMENT STORE, Curwensville, Pa.

STARTS FRIDAY, JANUARY 9th., 9 A. M.

THE EVENT FOR WHICH THE PUBLIC HAS BEEN IMPATIENTLY WAITING

In these days of curtailed production and excessive demand--when it is difficult to produce desirable merchandise at any cost--it appears inconsistent to offer our open stock at reduced prices. Nevertheless in spite of the high market and appalling scarcity of all lines of merchandise, we are going to hold our customary End of the Season Sale--not from the standpoint of our own interests but because there is not a single advantage to be derived from this sale--but we have a reason for holding it--we realize that our hosts of friends and customers who regularly attend the Semi-Annual Events are expecting us to supply them with reasonable merchandise at reduced prices, and we are willing to make the sacrifice in order not to disappoint them. Every department will participate in this sale and each is putting in its utmost efforts to outdo the others in offering sensational values. This sale is held solely for the benefit of the public. Quantity buying for speculative purposes will not be permitted. The exceptional merchandising opportunities presented in our January Clearance Sale will instantly appeal to the thrifty and wide awake shoppers. Come prepared to take advantage of every opportunity.

Crooked Trails and Straight

"For God's sake, don't tell anybody that." In a dozen jerky sentences the owner of the Fiddleback told Flandrau of the suspicions of the sheriff.

Together they went in search of Luck. But though they looked for him all day, he was not to be found. The last that had been seen of him Luck was walking along the plaza toward the hotel, not a hundred and fifty yards from the latter. A dozen men had spoken to him in the distance of a block. But he had not been seen to reach his hotel. He had not called for his room key. Somehow he had vanished, and none could tell how or where.

To halt his disappearance was as good as a confession of guilt. He searched Luck's room at the hotel. Among other things, he found an old envelope with interesting data penciled on it.

Before nightfall the word was whispered all over Saginaw that Luck Cullison, pioneer cattleman and former sheriff, was suspected of the W. & S. express robbery and had fled to save himself from arrest. At first men marveled that one so well known and so popular, one who had been so prominent in affairs, could be suspected of such a crime, but as they listened to the evidence and saw it fall like blocks of a building into place, the conviction grew that he was the masked bandit wanted by the sheriff.

Red-headed Bob Cullison finished making the diamond hitch and proudly called his cousin Kate to inspect the packhorse.

"You never saw the hitch thrown better, sis," he bragged, boylike. "Uncle Luck says I do it well as he can."

"It's fine, Bob," his cousin agreed, with the proper enthusiasm in her dark eyes. "You'll have to teach me how to do it one of these days."

She was in a khaki riding skirt, and she pulled herself to the saddle of her own horse. From this position she gave him final instructions before leaving.

It had been on Wednesday morning that Luck Cullison disappeared from the face of the earth. Before twenty-four hours the word was being whispered in the most distant canons of Papago county. The riders of the Circle C knew it, but none of them had yet told either Bob or Kate.

Now it was Friday morning and Kate was beginning to wonder why her father did not call her up. Could it be that Soapy Stone was pulling off his train robbery at Tin Cup and her father so busy that he could not take time to ride to a telephone station? She did not like to leave the ranch just now, even for a few hours, but other business called her away.

Sweeney was holding down the fort at the Del Oro against Fendrick's sheepherders, and his weekly supply of provisions had to be taken to him. Since she wanted to see with her own eyes how things were getting along at the canon, she was taking the supplies in person.

She rode from sunlight into shadow and from shadow to sunlight again, winding along the hill trail that took her toward the Del Oro. After hours of travel she came to the saddle front which one looked down to the gap in the canon walls that had been the common watering place of all men's cattle, but now was homesteaded by her father. She could see the hut, the fenced line running parallel to the stream on the other side, some grazing cattle, Sweeney's horse in the corral.

The piteous bleating of a lamb floated to her. Kate dismounted and made her way toward the sound. A pathetic little bundle of frightened life tried to struggle free at her approach. The slim leg of the lamb had become wedged in the intersection of several rocks in such a way that it could not be withdrawn.

Kate pulled the boulder away, and released the prisoner. She took the soft, woolly creature in her arms, and examined the wounded limb, all torn and raw from its efforts to escape. A wound, she recalled, ought to be washed with cold water and bound. Returning to her horse, she put the little animal in front of the saddle and continued on the trail that led down to the river.

Sweeney came out from the cabin and hailed her. He was a squat, weather-beaten man, who had ridden for her father ever since she could remember. "What in Mexico you got there?" he asked in surprise.

She explained the circumstances under which she had found the lamb.

"And what you aiming to do with it?"

"I'm going to tie up its leg and take it across the river. Some of the C. F. herders are sure to find it before night."

"Sho! What are you fooling with Cass Fendrick's sheep for?" he grumbled.

"It isn't a sheep, but a lamb. And I'm not going to see it suffer, no matter who owns it. All just ride across and leave it outside the fence," she said.

"Lemme go. I know the river better."

Sweeney did not wait for her assent, but swung to the saddle. She handed him the lamb, and he forded the stream.

Sweeney saw some one disappear into a wash as he reached the fence. The rider held up the lamb, jabbered a sentence of broncho Spanish at the spot where the man had been, put down his bleeding burden, and cantered back to his own side of the river.

An hour later, Kate, on the return trip, topped the rise where she had found the lamb. Pulling up her pony, to rest the horse from its climb, she gazed back across the river to the rolling ridges among which lay the C. F. ranch. Oddly enough, she had never seen Cass Fendrick. He had come to Papago county a few years before, and had bought the place from an earlier settler. In the disagreement that had fallen between the two men, she was wholly on the side of her father. Sometimes she had wondered what manner of man this Cass Fendrick might be; disagreeable, of course, but after precisely what fashion?

"Your property, I believe, Miss Cullison."

She turned at sound of the suave, amused drawl, and looked upon a dark, slim young man of picturesque appearance. He was bowing to her with an obvious intention of overdoing it.

Her instinct told the girl who he was. She did not need to ask herself any longer what Cass Fendrick looked like.

He was holding out to her the blood-stained kerchief that had been tied to the lamb's leg.

"I didn't care to have it returned," she told him with cold civility.

"Now, if you'd only left a note to say so, it would have saved me quite a considerable climb," he suggested.

In spite of herself a flicker of amusement lit her eyes. She had a sense of humor. "I did not think of that, and since you have trouble to return it to me, I can only say thank you."

She held out her hand for the kerchief, but he did not move. "I don't know but what I'll keep it, after all, for a souvenir."

She ignored his sardonic mockery. "I don't let live creatures suffer when I can help it. Are you going to give me my handkerchief?"

"Haven't made up my mind yet. Perhaps I'll have it washed and bring it home to you."

She decided he was trying to flirt with her, and turned the head of her horse to start.

"Now your father has pulled his freight, I expect it will be safe to call," he added.

The bridle rein tightened. "What nonsense are you saying about my father?"

"No news, Miss Cullison; just what everybody is saying, that he has gone to cover on account of the holdup."

A chill fear drenched her heart. "Do you mean the holdup of the Limited at Tin Cup?"

"No I don't." He looked at her sharply. "Mean to say you haven't heard of the holdup of the W. & S. Express, company at Saginaw?"

"No. When was it?"

"Tuesday night. The man got away with twenty thousand dollars."

"And what has my father to do with that?" she demanded haughtily.

A satisfied spasm purred in his voice. "My dear young lady, that is what everyone is asking."

"What do you mean? Say it." There was fear as well as anger in her voice. Had her father somehow got into trouble trying to save Sam?

"Oh, I'm saying nothing. But what Sheriff Bolt means is that when he gets his handuffs on Luck Cullison he'll have the man that can tell him where that twenty thousand is."

"It's a lie."

He waved his hand airily, as one who declined responsibility in the matter, but his dark, saturnine face sparkled with malice.

"Maybe so. Seems to be some evidence, but I reckon he can explain that away—when he comes back. The holdup dropped a bat with the initials L. C. in the band, since identified as his. He had lost a lot of money at poker. Next day he paid it. He had no money in the bank, but maybe he found it growing on a cactus bush."

"You liar!" she panted, eyes blazing.

"I'll take that from you, my dear, because you look so blamed pretty when you're mad; but I wouldn't take it from him—from your father, who is hiding out in the hills somewhere."

Anger uncurbed welled from her in an inarticulate cry. He had come close to her, and was standing beside the stirrup, one hand held upon the rein. Her quiet swift and down, and like a thin bar of red-hot iron across his uplifted face. He stumbled back, half blind with the pain. Before he could realize what had happened the spur on her little boot touched the side of the pony and it was off with a bound. She was galloping wildly down the trail toward home.

He looked after her, fingers expressing the well that burned his cheek.

"You'll pay for that, Kate Cullison," he said aloud to himself.

Variations of the Straight Line Suit

With the beginning of the season suits and dresses were presented in a variety of silhouettes, and now that the midseason is here, the public has declared its preference. Wide-hip, crinoline and peg-top outlines captured and held their devotees, but a high percentage of well-dressed people pinned their faith to lines almost unbroken in suits, in dresses, and more particularly in evening gowns. No new aspirant has disturbed the stability of the straight-line suit, and now that manufacturers have tested out the public, that is the one thing they are entirely sure of. Therefore such new suits as they are turning out for present sale are variations of the straight-line models.

"Straight line" is not to be taken too literally. It means a silhouette having little definition at the waist-line. Such as there is results from belts and girdles and not from fitting. The two suits shown in the picture illustrate this point very clearly, and also bring out the introduction of new features that vary the style and make the suits interesting. There are at least two advantages in models of this kind—the style may be worn for a long time, it will pass out slowly and admits of a great variety of decorations.

In the suit at the left of the picture under-arm buckles and buttons appear in an original and attractive arrangement with lines running horizontally on the body of the coat and lengthwise below the belt. The coat opens over a vest and the cloth belt fastens through a buckle at the front. There is a small choker collar of fur.

In the figure at the right many buttons in two sizes and an original cut of the back of the body assume the responsibility of distinguishing this suit from its predecessors. A very long and narrow sash of the material slips twice about the waist and loops over at the left side. A wide turnover collar fastens up snugly about the throat. The skirts are both plain, one of them a trifle longer than the other. The length of skirts is very much a matter of individual taste at present, from six to nine inches off the floor.

Habit of Decision.
Most people who have succeeded in any direction of activity can trace the measure of their success to the habit of deciding things for themselves. One of the greatest temptations we have is to confide in others. By yielding to it we not only become a nuisance to our friends but keep on lowering our own powers of resistance.

Knew Value of Contrast.
For several evenings after school my small daughter persisted in coming home with an exceedingly unkempt-looking child. Upon asking her why she was possessed to go with such a dirty child she replied: "Oh, mother, I like to go with her 'cause it makes me look cleaner than I am."—Ex. change.
